JAY BEASLEY WORKS FOR YOU NOW!

AND AGAIN ON APRIL 12th, I PRESENT MYSELF FOR YOUR CONSIDERATION

J. A. "JAY" BEASLEY
INCUMBENT COUNCILMAN

WORKING FOR YOU NOW
AS AN EXPERIENCED,
RESPONSIBLE CITY
SERVANT . . .
CAST YOUR VOTE
FOR J. A. "JAY" BEASLEY
ON APRIL 12th.

. . . HERE ARE SOME OF THE PROJECTS I WILL WORK FOR IN THE FUTURE . . .

1. to build a new Central Library, with a minimum capacity of 180,000 volumes, selected to serve the special needs of the large numbers of professional and technical people in our community.
2. to improve our bus system as fast as possible, incorporating the use of small buses to develop a fast shuttle service within the City of Torrance.
3. to build and improve more primary and secondary streets to provide adequate transportation.
4. to complete our Civic Center Complex by building a new City Auditorium, Music Hall and Sports Arena . . . all geared to meet the specific needs of our growing community.
5. to maintain a stable, progressive City Government to attract new industry and business, so that we can eventually lower our city tax rate.

BY DOING ALL THESE THINGS WE CAN CONTINUE TO BUILD A DYNAMIC AND PROGRESSIVE COMMUNITY WHICH WE CAN ALL ENJOY IN EVER GREATER DEGREE.

CAESAR'S DEMISE . . . The North High Latin Club brought its annual Roman Banquet to a successful—and historically correct—ending last week with the assassination of Julius Caesar, portrayed by Marc Salamone. Doing the dirty work are, from left, Warren Nagano, Steve Sorensen, and John Zich. Jennifer Lutz reigned as Calpurnia, wife of Caesar, at the banquet. More than 100 students, all in Roman togas, attended the event. (Press-Herald Photo)

Garvin Calls for State Election Code Reforms

Speaking before two prominent church groups this week, Harold Garvin, Harbor College government instructor and candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Senator in the new 32nd District, spoke out strongly for election law reform to purify California elections, for an urgently needed expansion of Harbor Area recreational facilities, for prompt and effective controls on dumps, and for localizing city planning.

At the First Methodist Church in Wilmington, he explained that almost all Los Angeles city planning for the Harbor Area is done in downtown Los Angeles, resulting in plans that are "unrealistic for us, unsuited for us, and fail to deal effectively with our many urgent civic needs."

Later, at the Grand View Methodist Church in San Pedro, Garvin went into more detail, pointing to "unique opportunities for civic beauty" which San Pedro possesses and the "rather inadequate efforts" that have been made to "make this potential beauty an actuality."

Garvin, a former World War II flier, stated: "San Pedro could be a miniature San Francisco, and our harbor could actually become the greatest in the hemisphere. But this will take innovation and vision, not the long-distance unimaginative city planning we too often get now."

The council, working with the Economic and Youth Opportunities Agency, is sponsoring some 50 Head Start classes under the federal government's "Operation Head Start."

The program is designed to give culturally deprived children an opportunity to enter kindergarten on the same level as more advantaged children.

NICKOLAS "NICK" DRALE

Candidate for Mayor of Torrance

Speaks Out on Tactics in Campaigning

From the beginning of the campaign for the office of Mayor of Torrance my campaign manager, Milt Isbell, and I were in complete agreement as to the type of race we would conduct. We wanted our advertisements and campaign materials to be constructive, positive, and free of mud-slinging and personal attack. We felt that the people of Torrance would appreciate a political race that would spare them further embarrassment. I have run this type of campaign and will continue to do so in the face of increased provocations!

My opponent's advertisements are based on untruths, personal attack, and innuendo and we can expect more, because desperate men do desperate things!

I believe our approach to campaigning is the wise one, for more and more citizens who wish to remove the black cloud which has, for too long, been hanging over Torrance, are stepping forward to lend their support.

I hope that you, too, will show your approval by voting for me on April 12th.

Thank you,
Nick Drale
